Bruce Fogelsong,

Your contributions Recovery Network's startup was greatly appreciated. As a new technology that bridges the gap between a data network and standard broadcast distribution your time was well spent and I'm writing this letter as a reference for the potential clientele of your services.

Bruce was instrumental in the early development of our system architecture and excelled at visualizing design ideas, communications, technical coordination, programming, network design, contractor management, quality assurance, deployment, server configuration, and software development (both server and client side). I felt that the years of corporate project management experience in the petroleum industry translated well to early adoption of standardized practices. His systematic method for project review is ideal for tracking the progress of a project and his technical background provided hands-on support.

I could recommend Bruce for just his expertise in the above services, but what I feel what sets Bruce apart from many technicians is that he is easy to communicate with, easy to understand and is engaged in the project at hand.

If you have any questions to would like to follow up with a phone call, please connect with me at your convenience.

Sincerely,

Jon Lindgren
CEO, Recovery Network & Broadcast Systems
